BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

Born on October 23, 1904, just across the street from the Austin Country Club, Harvey Penick enjoyed golf from a young age. According to Harvey's handwritten notes for Harvey Penick's Little Red Book, he began caddying at the Austin Country Club around 1912. He watched the golfers closely and became a life-long student of the game. Leaders of the Austin Country Club took note of his passion and dedication and when the head professional left for a new position, they appointed Harvey Penick to the post. The Country Club even held the job open for Penick so that he could graduate from high school first, as stipulated by his mother.

Penick took out almost all the money he had in the bank, bought the previous golf professional's clubs and equipment, and became the head professional in 1923 at the age of 18. He met Helen Holmes in 1924, and they married in 1929, remaining so until his passing. Together, they had two children: a daughter, Kathryn, and a son, Tinsley. Early on, Harvey Penick had dreams of becoming a touring professional until he saw Walter Hagen play at the 1928 U.S. Open at Olympia Fields in Chicago. After that, he decided to remain a golf teacher rather than becoming a touring pro. He taught legends such as Betty Jameson, Sandra Palmer, Betsy Rawls, one of the first LPGA standout performers, Kathy Whitworth and Mickey Wright. Along with being the pro at the Austin Country Club, Harvey Penick also coached the University of Texas golf team from 1931 to 1963, during which time the Longhorns won 22 of a possible 31 Southwest Conference titles.

In the 1960s, Harvey Penick began coaching two of the most famous golfers in the modern era: Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite. Each of them credits his faithful devotion and positivity with molding them as both people and golfers. Tom Kite declared that he would never have won any tournaments without Penick's teachings. Kite was once the all-time leading money winner in PGA Tour history and won the 1992 U.S. Open. Days after Penick's death, Crenshaw won the 1995 Masters Cup, crediting a putting tip that Harvey gave him about visualizing the ball going into the hole for his victory. He retired from the Austin Country Club in 1971 when his son, Tinsley, took over his position as golf pro. A year later, in 1972, Harvey broke his back in a golf cart accident, but continued to be a presence on the green until his death.

Later in his life, Penick decided to relate his golf wisdom and stories in Harvey Penick's Little Red Book with author Bud Shrake. The book was based on a learning notebook that Harvey carried around for decades that he never shared with anyone, except his son Tinsley, until Shrake convinced him to publish the contents in the early 1990s. Released in 1992, Harvey Penick's Little Red Book almost instantly became a national and international bestseller as word got out about Harvey's gentle and positive outlook on golf and life. Harvey Penick passed away on April 2, 1995, but his son, Tinsley carried on his legacy as a golf coach until his death in 2019.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection consists of 10 boxes of material organized into 17 series with dates ranging from 1904 to 2019. Primarily, the material focuses on the career of Harvey Penick as a writer and coach to professional golfers, such as Ben Crenshaw, Tom Kite, and Betsy Rawls. There is some material related to his time as the golf pro at Austin Country Club, but material about his coaching career at the University of Texas is limited. The correspondence and clippings are the most comprehensive sections with clippings starting in 1904 and letters written to Harvey Penick as early as 1923. In addition, the collection contains material pertaining to the Penick family generally, including many family photographs and miscellaneous ephemera.

Also, of particular note in this collection are the early manuscripts of Harvey Penick's Little Red Book, including the notebook in which Penick wrote down his tips and tricks that would eventually become the book that made Penick famous around the world. Most of the material is in English, but catalogued with the books removed from the collection are copies of Penick's books in German, Italian, Mandarin, Japanese, and Korean. Additional material relates to Tinsley Penick's writing and coaching career before and after the death of Harvey Penick in 1995.
