Abstracts

Ottley R. Coulter

Ottley Coulter was a famous circus strongman and handbalancer. Coulter was born June 6, 1890 in Parkland, Ohio. His exploits led Coulter to be named Strongman of 1912. He participated in the National Police Gazette Strongman Tournament in 1918, lifting a total of 7,306 pounds over the course of several events. In the early 1920s, Coulter and George Jowett formed the American Continental Weightlifting Association (A.C.W.L.A.) to regulate the practice. Coulter later began to collect all manner of items related to the iron game. Terry Todd met Ottley while using Coulter's materials to aid in the completion of Todd's PhD dissertation. Coulter passed away in 1976 and the fonds were purchased by Jan and Terry Todd. The materials became part of their physical culture collection which developed into the basis for the creation of the Stark Center. The letters in the Jowett-Coulter Letters (a sub-collection of the Ottley R. Coulter Collection) mention numerous famous physical culturists and organizations.

George Fiusdale Jowett

George F. Jowett was one of the first to offer strength correspondence courses to people at a time when there really were relatively few gymnasiums. He was born December 23, 1891 in England and lived there until 1911 when he immigrated to Canada. In 1923 he moved to Pittsburgh and then Scranton, Pennsylvania where he established the Jowett Institute of Physical Culture. Also in the early 1920s, Jowett and Ottley Coulter formed the American Continental Weightlifting Association (A.C.W.L.A.) in an effort to standardize records. In later years Jowett established the Body Sculpture Club in England and became the public warden for his local church. He also tried to bring industry to the Morrisburg, Ontario, Canada area, succeeding with a chemical plant in 1959. He passed away in 1969. The correspondence in the Jowett-Coulter Letters sub-collection spans nearly 50 years and covers sundry physical culture topics.

Biographical Notes

Ottley R. Coulter

Ottley Coulter excelled as a circus strongman, muscle control artist and later as a handbalancer with his partner, Charles Shaffer. Born in Parkland, Ohio, June 6, 1890, Coulter made use of nutrition and training to become the stoutest of his household. He performed throughout the 19 teens as a circus strongman, achieving the title of Strongman of 1912. Furthermore, Coulter toured with Charles Shaffer performing handbalancing acts in different arenas and at circuses, beginning in 1916. On March 21, 1918, Coulter took part in the National Police Gazette Strongman Tournament organized by the publisher of the Gazette, Richard K. Fox. At that contest, Coulter performed the Jefferson lift with 510 pounds, a world record at the time. Over a series of events Coulter lifted an astounding 7,306 pounds though he only weighed 139 pounds. In 1923, Coulter performed another world record endeavor by succeeding in the raising of 109 pounds in the Rectangular Fix lift.

Coulter met Ethel Alexander, whom he married in 1917. The couple moved to Pittsburgh around 1920 and together they had three children: Athelda, David and John Robert. In the early 1920s, Coulter and George F. Jowett worked together to create the first weightlifting association in the United States, the American Continental Weight Lifting Association (A.C.W.L.A.). Coulter and Jowett also attempted to create an Apollo Training Course correspondence system, but the courses did not catch on with the public and had to be abandoned. In 1931, Coulter briefly considered joining George Jowett at the Health Developing Company, makers of the famous Seat of Health rowing machine. However, Ottley decided the New York City position would too often take him away from Ethel and the children in Pennsylvania. Moreover, Ethel wanted to continue to raise chickens, not a likely proposition in New York City.

In later years, Ottley Coulter and George Jowett remained close. The letters from the 1960s detailed how both men felt that physical culture had lost its way thanks to the rise of bodybuilding and an overemphasis on muscle size. Nevertheless, Coulter retained his love for the iron game and continued to attend both weightlifting and powerlifting contests. Ottley further related his meeting with Terry Todd and Ottley's belief that his vast physical culture holdings needed to be preserved for future generations. Coulter stated in one of the 1967 letters that as he was nearly 77 he would not have much longer use for his collection, and that if he felt the amount offered to him by Terry Todd were commensurate with the funds' value, Todd would receive the materials. Ottley Coulter passed away in 1976, but through the purchase from Coulter's family of his collection by Jan and Terry Todd (including the Jowett-Coulter Letters sub-collection); Coulter has ensured that generations will be fascinated by the iron game.

George Fiusdale Jowett

George Fiusdale Jowett first engaged in wrestling and strongman feats, including arm wrestling (wrist turning), later creating a fitness correspondence course offered to the public so that they might achieve his muscularity. Born in Bradford, Yorkshire, England, December 23, 1891, Jowett participated in wrestling and boxing bouts as early as age 15, immigrating to Canada in 1911 at the age of 19. He arrived in Inkerman, Ontario and worked as a blacksmith for over a decade. On October 15, 1913 he married Elizabeth (Bessie) Hilda Bouck and their daughter, Frances Phyllis Eliza (went by Phyllis) arrived April 30, 1916. In 1923 George F. Jowett moved to Pittsburgh, PA where he taught physical education classes and performed in strength shows. Jowett befriended Ottley Coulter, a famous strongman, at that time, and together they founded the first weightlifting association in the United States, the American Continental Weight Lifting Association (A.C.W.L.A.). The A.C.W.L.A. tried to create standards for types and methods of lifts, such that records could be vetted and the public could trust in their veracity.

Jowett later moved to Scranton, PA where he founded the Jowett Institute of Physical Culture, the concern that would publish his famous fitness correspondence courses. Then he moved to Philadelphia, there creating his American Athletic Appliance Company, and for the Canadian Market, the Canadian Athletic Appliance Co. (based in Morrisburg, Ontario): leaders in the production of exercise equipment. He also was involved with the Health Sales Corporation, producer of the Seat of Health, a rowing machine that folded to fit in a suitcase. Johnny Weissmuller, of swimming and Tarzan fame, loved the product so much that he endorsed it without compensation. Furthermore, a Mitchell Parish and Frank Perkins song of the early 1930s celebrated the apparatus, exclaiming that you Seat Yourself in a Seat of Health (And You'll Sit Pretty All Day).

A 1940 back accident led George F. Jowett to start to slow down, but Ben Rayburn kept using his image and name to promote correspondence fitness courses into the early 1960s. After moving back to Inkerman in 1945, Jowett befriended a young Joe Weider and later allowed Ben and Joe Weider to sell some of his remaining strength books. Jowett became the public warden of Holy Trinity Anglican Church in nearby Riverside, helping to move the building so it would not be submerged by the St.

Lawrence Seaway Development Project. Jowett also wrote a religious book, entitled The Drama of the Lost Disciples, first published in 1961. Jowett continued to work for the community, trying to get companies to locate plants in Cornwall, another city near to Inkerman. Jowett passed away July 11, 1969 and a window in Holy Trinity Church was dedicated to him reading: To The Glory of God And In Ever Loving Memory of George Fiusdale Jowett, Born 23rd Sept. (should be Dec.) 1891. Died 11th July 1969. He spent his Life Dedicated in Service to Mankind.

Scope and Content

3 Boxes, 13 Folders: 472 letters, 9 notes, 3 lists, 2 cards, 2 clippings, 2 receipts, 2 telegrams, 492 Items (1920-1968).

The entirety of the Jowett-Coulter Letters sub-collection of the Ottley R. Coulter Collection is correspondence between George F. Jowett and Ottley R. Coulter, ranging from 1920-1968. In the 472 letters and various other items the two men discuss many physical culture topics and mention giants of the field such as Eugen Sandow, Arthur Saxon, Joe Weider and countless others. This makes the sub-collection an indispensable resource for the understanding of the history of the iron game and its role in the story of physical culture in general.
